

▶ JAPANESENationalHomeNationalSportsBusinessWorldFeaturesColumnsEditorialTopCabinet LineupHome > NationalWeather

Doc exiled after blowing whistle on graft

The Yomiuri Shimbun

YOKOHAMA--A doctor at Yokohama City University's medical school who blew the whistle on the inappropriate practice of students giving cash gifts to faculty members to obtain doctorates has been transferred to a department where the doctor's skills cannot be applied, The Yomiuri Shimbun has learned.

According to sources at the school, the university normally does not assign doctors or other medical experts to departments unconnected with their specializations unless they request such a transfer. "I haven't heard of such a case," one source said.

The doctor informed the university's compliance committee in November 2007 that postgraduate students belonging to a research group of Hiroshi Shimada, former dean of the medical school, had been giving cash gifts to faculty and obtaining doctorates, the doctor told the Yomiuri. Shimada resigned as dean in late March.

The doctor was subsequently given an informal notice of transfer in January. "I asked the committee for protection, saying that I might be transferred because my research hadn't finished," the doctor said. "But the committee didn't do anything about my request."

The doctor was transferred to a department at a hospital in Kanagawa Prefecture on April 1.

After receiving the information, the committee questioned Shimada and others in the research group and released in March a report in which it confirmed the existence of the practice of students handing over cash gifts to faculty to obtain doctorates.

The university's in-house regulations require those concerned to protect whistle-blowers who reveal illegal or unethical practices from being victimized.

"We tried to provide protection for the whistle-blower in line with the regulations, but we can't say that we were able to protect him or her in the end," said Kimio Okada, vice president of the university and a member of the committee.

Concerning the whistle-blowing activity, 11 members of Shimada's research group, including associate professors, submitted to the chairman of the university's board of directors and the university president in February a letter of complaint demanding that the whistle-blower be punished for "distorting" practices in the medical school "with

Topics

- ▶ The 29th Cartoon Contest
- ▶ A cut above the rest
- ▶ Musings

THE DAILY YOMIURI

Subscribe

▶ English ▶ Japanese

A D GoLloyds - The easy way to send your money abroad

SELFing 自分発見・自分開発・スキルアップ

日本語教師養成講座

資格取得・キャリアアップ

human 詳しくはこちら

Media Data

- ▶ THE YOMIURI SHIMBUN
- ▶ THE DAILY YOMIURI

Info

- ▶ WHO WAS RESPONSIBLE?
- ▶ Archives
- ▶ New dictionary on sale

Link

- ▶ The Daily Yomiuri Partners
- ▶ NTV
- ▶ YTV
- ▶ ANN

malicious intent."

Meanwhile, asked by the Education, Science and Technology Ministry to carry out a thorough investigation into the issue, the university set up a university degree screening committee headed by a former head of the special investigation squad at the Tokyo District Public Prosecutors Office. The committee released an interim report on May 2 that said 16 professors and associate professors received a total of about 5.7 million yen.

"We can't protect a whistle-blower if we don't know who the person is. If we didn't transfer the person to other departments, it would be obvious to other people who has blown the whistle. It's possible for anyone to be transferred to a department or section that he or she doesn't wish to be transferred to," a spokesman for the university's secretariat said.

(May. 12, 2008)

National

go

- ◆ 85% of local govts offer free metabolic syndrome checks (May.13)
- ◆ Gas tax bill set for passage in revote (May.13)
- ◆ Defense body probed over tax (May.13)
- ◆ Video shows dead girl with man (May.13)
- ◆ Bar to reprimand 2 lawyers in Kobe ex-assemblyman's case (May.13)
- ◆ Firms, family fear for quake victims (May.13)
- ◆ Gourmet delivery around the clock (May.13)
- ◆ Rail disaster victims' kin band together (May.13)
- ◆ New medical checkups problematic / National targets 'cannot be easily reached'; local govts shouldering free test costs (May.13)
- ◆ Met Agency to drop gizmos into typhoons to collect data (May.13)

 More

AP News

- ▶ JVC and Kenwood to set up joint holding company for October merger
- ▶ Grand champion Asashoryu rebounds on day 2 of Summer Grand Sumo Tournament
- ▶ Bank of Japan governor says focus is now on risks facing economy
- ▶ Renault-Nissan forms joint venture with Bajaj to make inexpensive car in India
- ▶ Toyota executive says new Mississippi auto plant delayed by worries over US market
- ▶ Japanese shares rise on high-tech gains as investors await US Fed chairman's speech
- ▶ 3 Japanese found dead in car; police suspect lethal gas made from detergent
- ▶ Fujitsu's fiscal fourth quarter profit drops 40 percent on computer chip restructuring costs
- ▶ Japanese court rejects suit demanding halt of harbor work for US nuclear-powered carrier

▶ G-8 labor officials gather in Japan to seek environment-friendly working style

---

Home > National

---

▶ The Daily Yomiuri, The Yomiuri Shimbun

DAILY YOMIURI ONLINE | THE DAILY YOMIURI

Page Top

Web Site Policies | About Us | Privacy Policy | Copyright | Linking Policy | Contact Us |
© The Yomiuri Shimbun.